curriculum review

VOL. 23, NO. 3, JUNE 1984

1983-84 ANNUAL INDEX

Last year the curriculum committee waded through 86 new books before reaching a consensus.

This year they read just one.

That book was Curriculum Review.

For more than 40,000 educators, Curriculum Review is the screening tool that helps to choose text, text supplements, media kits and now computer courseware. Last year alone, 117 basal textbooks and 646 other titles were reviewed for grades K through 12.

No rehashed news releases

Educators have trusted Curriculum Review for 20 years because it presents objective, in-depth reviews, not just edited versions of publishers' news releases. Curriculum Review also keeps them on the cutting edge of topics that make news in education such as computer literacy, mainstreaming, values education, gifted education, career education and problem solving.

Every review, every article in every issue is prepared by a staff of 150 educators. Each is a subject matter specialist. Each is a professor or teacher with active classroom experience.

To receive the selection tool 40,000 educators depend on, check the proper subscription category below, clip and mail the coupon. We think you'll find you can't afford to do without Curriculum Review.

Title Index

Our alphabetical title index will allow you to easily locate educational materials and professional references reviewed between February 1983 and April 1984. For planning special units or finding fresh additions to those already in place, consult the "Area" column on the far right side of each page and read across to the left for other pertinent information. The Area column, in addition to specifying our four basic content areas, also includes the categories of computer literacy, and curriculum, and our 1983-84 features (see box below). Some of the material reviewed in the features would be appropriate for more than one subject area.
